Most people think they know what arthritis is. But the truth is, arthritis is Canada's most misunderstood and widespread chronic disease. It silently impacts more people in Canada than diabetes, heart disease, cancer, stroke, and dementia combined. It devastates lives. It is the leading cause of disability—stealing employment, mobility, careers and dreams—and costs our economy more than $33 billion annually. It affects people of all ages, including 1 in 4 women, 1 in 6 men, and more than 25,000 children. Without bold action, 9 million people in Canada will be affected within the next two decades.

Arthritis Society Canada is igniting an unprecedented national movement that will change the course of arthritis forever and has mobilized 22 partner organizations to co-create the groundbreaking Arthritis Action Now: The Plan to End Arthritis—the first nationwide strategy bold enough to revolutionize prevention, diagnosis, treatment, and put us on a path to cures. As the backbone organization for this national movement, Arthritis Society Canada is driving coordinated, system-level change.
